Evidently their view-point is changing, as illustrated by THE WAR S.TUATICN.

For several days reports have come from Holland, of the concentration of large forces of Germans with big guins on the western front in Flanders, and reports are current. that the Kaiser reports were made a combined and and the statistic made of the statistic force of men he will attempt to batter his way to the coast, while You This way to the coast, while You This way to the coast, while You This will desper from the Kiel Canal, and, aided by a fleet of Zeppelius, try conclusions with the British fleet in the North dea. It is said that the German dreadenoifts are funded with 17-land guns, and that they will be foreinfable aniagonists to the British fleet. So far as the land forces are concerned, the British and French should be in a position to cope with anything the aneay may bring against them. The Allies have had very one the western front. And as for the point is changing, as illustrated by the intense intenset displaced by many, of our progressive business organizations in home tride. Slowly but suited by, it is being recognized that if we wish to sell our products shrede we must be prepared to buy frestly in-ran, and that accessive tariffs check exports as well as imports; or, other words, we must avoid shutting ourselves in while endeavoring to show the home to the words, we must avoid shutting ourselves in while endeavoring to the his in the concluding results are not present the six of the concluding results are not the six of the concluding results as the six of t on the western front, and as for the expected naval combat, the British will have little misgiving. Who Shall Control Your Private Life

O you propose to be robbed of your freedom as British subjects or not? That is the plain issue in this Prohibition campaign. It is not whether you may drink a glass of beer: that is a minor matter. It is whether a body of men, obsessed with one idea and working upon the excited enthusiasm of their followers, shall presume to control your private life. For, if they do this in one thing, why not in everything? That has always been the story of these assaults upon personal freedom, and history is full of them: an attack upon one particular point and then gradually along the whole line.

Puritanism in England and the Blue Laws of New England are ances in point.

The men who are opposing Prohibition to-day, therefore, are fighting exactly the same battle as are the Allies; for Liberty against Tyranny.

THERE are several things, also, to be remembered in this connection. First, this cont at has nothing to do with individual abstinence. Many of the strongest opponents of Prohibition are total abstainers. Every man has a perfect right to be an abstainer, and in some instances duty may demand this of him. Again, this question of Liberty is entirely apart from the religious phase of the subject, for even the most ardent Prohibition ist will not claim that he is supported in his position by Christianity or the Bible. Again, Provincial Prohibition is heralded as being but a step towards the Absolute Prohibition in heralded as being but a step towards the his senses believe that this could personally any of the manufacture and importation of alcoholic beverages. Now, does anybody in his senses believe that this could personal whom the senses thing in the world for anyoe to make whiskey? Epecially in Canada would it be unenforcible, wh his enormous and open frontiers. The Dominion would certainly then be the favored home of the "Bootlegger," "Blind-pigger," and "Moonshiner."

Do you intend, then, to forfeit your Liberty, won through centuries of struggle, or do you not? That is the question: no more, no less.

TOO LATE TO GLASSIFY

"The young man who has no bad habits," said the clorgyman, stands the best chance of marrying a rich man's daughter. "Yes, I guess he is less expensive to maintain than the other kind," mused the young man. Of course women are westeful. Just see the way they kins each other?
